FIELD STATION is a collaborative zine made during 2 hour sessions where attendees are invited to participate in guided comics composition activities. The sessions are fun & educational social gatherings for all ages.

Every month we make drawings and comics, collect them in a little zine like this one and then distribute print copies of the zines at our next gathering to all attendees.

Consider this your invitation to join us!

FIELD STATION is more than just a name for our publication, it is a concept that embodies the essence of our work at the Comics Club!

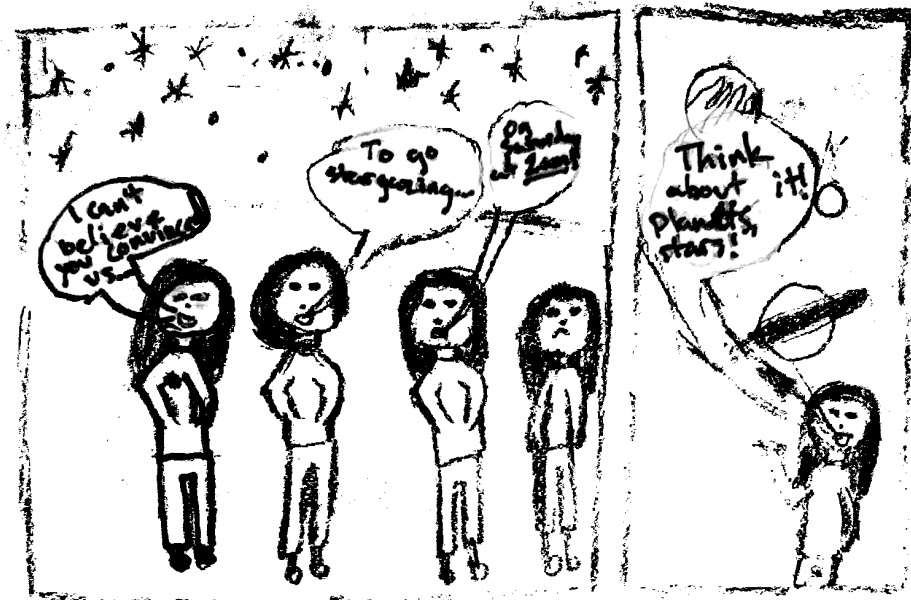

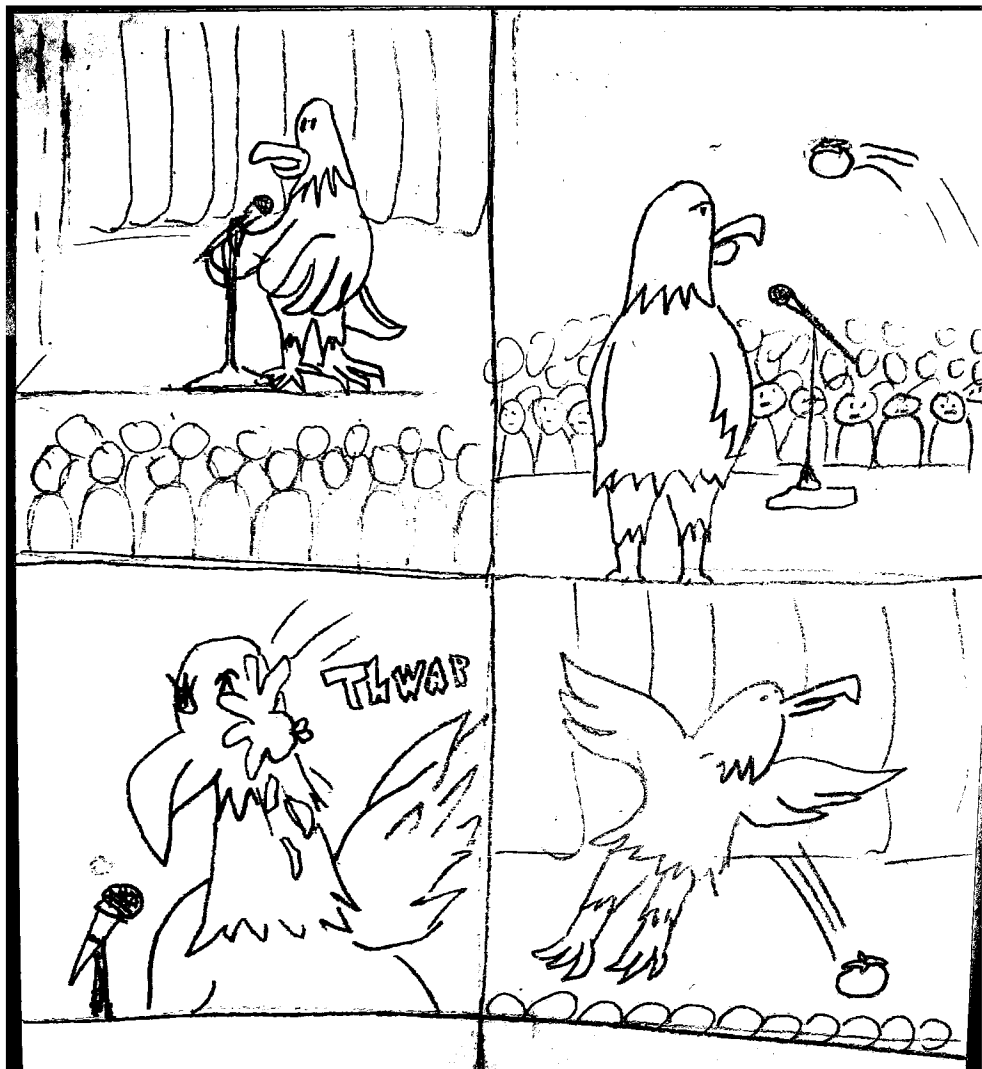

Inspired by the idea of a biological field station, where humans carefully observe a natural place over time, we use our publication to observe and document the natural buzzing creative activity that occurs during each monthly Comics Club session.

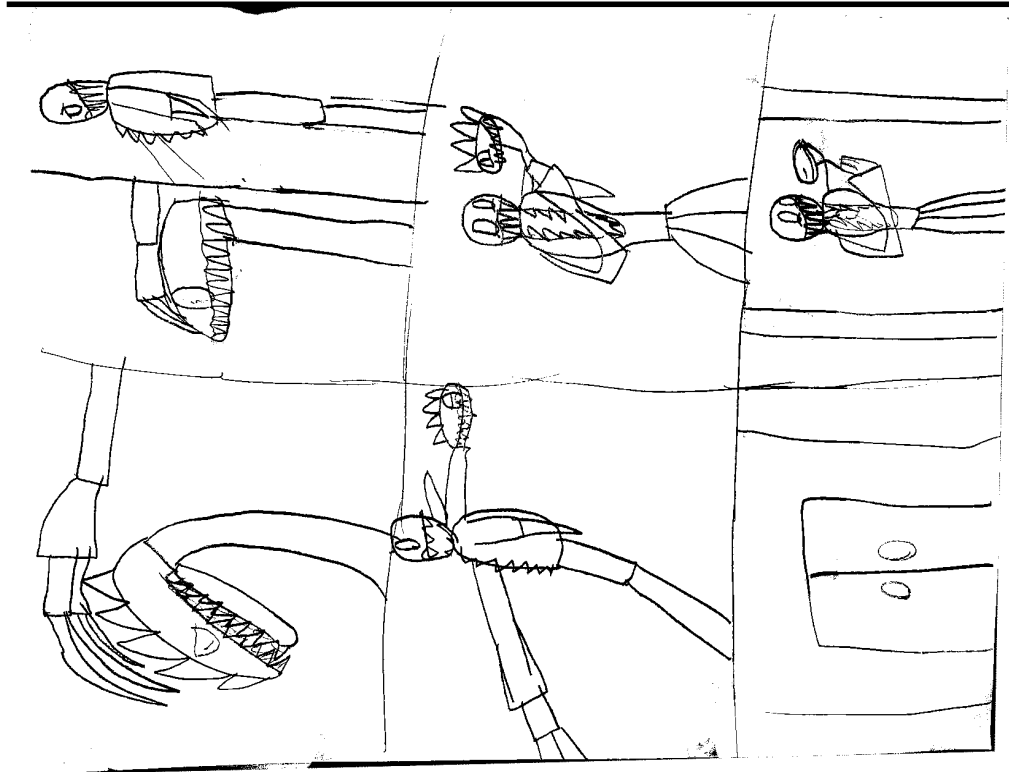

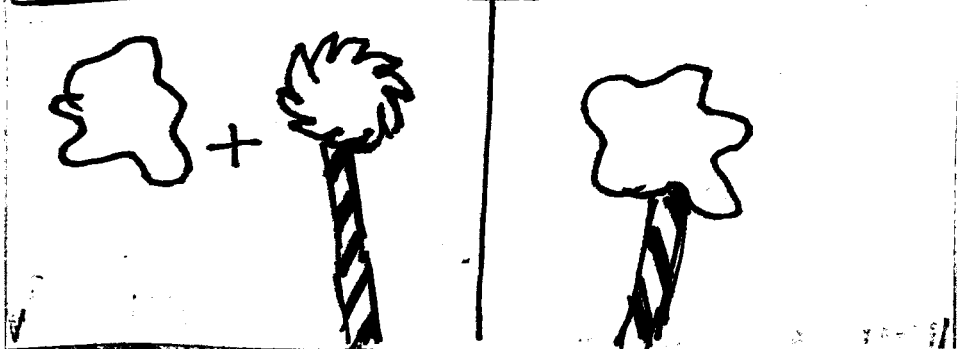

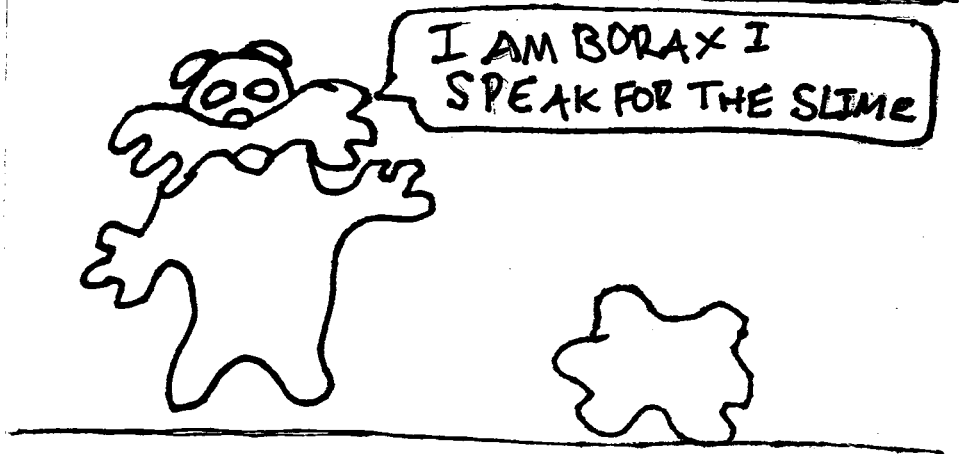

As participants explore and play with the intuitive visual language of comics they invariably translate their unique lived experiences into symbols and signs.

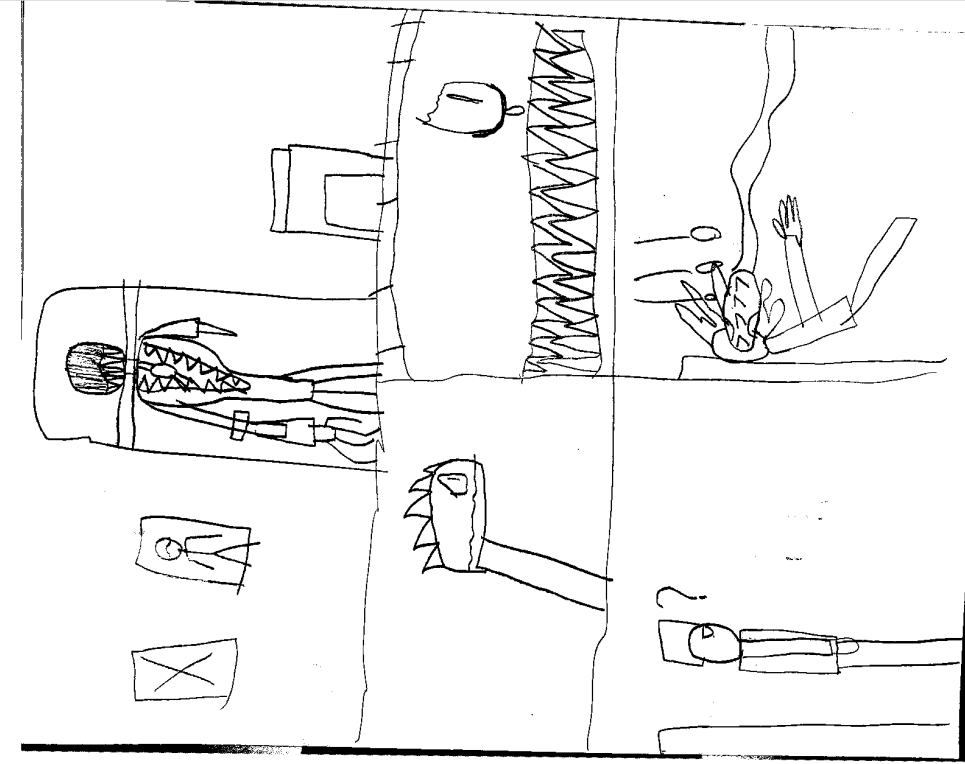

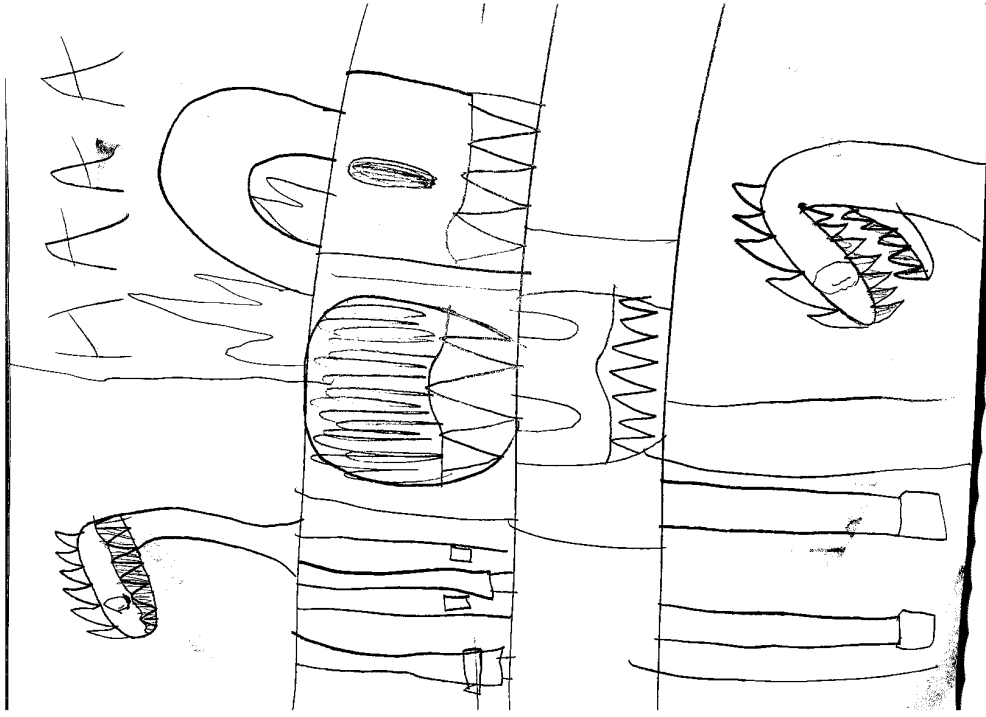

FIELD STATION serves as a lens to document the vibrant, living, visual language of the community that shows up to our Comics Club sessions.

These zines are our living library!
